GAP Team Matches

GAP Team Matches

www.gapgolf.org

The GAP Team Matches, as the event is called today, was the genesis of the Golf Association of Philadelphia.

On Oct. 15, 1896, a team representing Philadelphia Cricket Club squared off against a team representing Devon Golf Club's top players. The Cricket Club won, 22-12. The occasion was so thoroughly enjoyable (even the losers had a grand time) that the appeal of inter-club matches on a broader scale was discussed and embraced. The obvious outgrowth of such thinking was the formation of an association of local golf clubs to organize and administer these competitions.

A year later, the Association's first year, the Interclub Team Matches were initiated.

In 1915, the competition became known as the Suburban League Matches. The Suburban League Matches were not played during World War II (1943, 1944 and 1945), or in 1994 when the matches were cancelled due to severe winter storms. In 1997, the name of the matches changed to the GAP Team Matches.

The Matches is held on three Sundays in April. Each team consists of 12 players with six players staying at home and six going away. Each player competes in a singles match and a four-ball match concurrently.
